HUNTING IN ARKANSAS.

Report of The Christian County Hunting Club.

Incidents Picked Up on the Trip and Entertainingly Told by One of the Members.

(BY AUSTIN PEAY.)

Friday, Nov. 18.—Frost and quite cold. Capt. White is sick and remains in camp. "Know ye not that a prince and captain has this day fallen in Israel?" Capt. Caudle is in charge, and we take the dogs and go away beyond the Murphy house, five or six miles beyond camp. Caudle drove the woods in all directions and did his duty faithfully and well, and we held our stands like him of the proud, though child-like form, and still the deer would not come. They are too scarce and we are in the wrong place this year.

"Mother, can I go out to swim? To be sure, my daughter, But hang your clothes on a hickory limb And don't go near the water."

Lennox, Powers and Varner, the bear hunters, had no success either. Squire Jones shot a wild goose flying over our camp, high up in the air, with his rifle and brought him down. Wm. West, the silent man, instructs me to say that he shot at a buck swimming the Arkansas more than half a mile off and failed to kill him. He shot a vote at Weaver, who was further off than that, and it is the only way to account for a dereliction of this sort. A supper fit for the gods and grateful in the extreme to tired and hungry hunters.

Saturday, Nov. 19.—To-day Kentucky and Arkansas divided, and while Kentucky hunted deer Arkansas went for bear. We hunted the same ground as yesterday and with the same result. Jumped a few deer but no one got a shot. The bear hunters went to the cane on Red Rock bayou, and Powers' splendid dogs soon had up a large bear and two cubs. They divided and one dog followed the old bear, and the rest, with the "scatter gang," which Varner had loosed, gave chase to the cub. He was frightened and struck off through the open woods for Child's cane, three miles distant. They had a splendid chase with dogs in full cry and men in hot pursuit. In Child's cane they pushed him up a large tree, where Squire Jones found him and sent a ball from his unerring Winchester through him. In the meantime the old bear had turned on the dog in pursuit of her and rendered him hors du combat by biting him through and through. Powers brought him to camp and he is being cared for tenderly, but the chances for life are against him.

Sunday, Nov. 20.—It is Sunday, and beautiful and bright beyond description. My memory of our Sundays in Arkansas camps, and they are many, is that they have always been unusually bright. Man may forget this holy day here. Our Father never does, but always has a smiling benediction for its memory.

Some of the men are hunting in a quiet way, and others are engaged in a vain attempt to improve somewhat their lack of personal pulchritude. The sun is shining brightly, but not warm, for the air is keen and bracing. Our lake is not Como, and Burke's boat lacks the tout ensemble of a gondola, but the sky above—and there is none other—is of a deep liquid, Italian blue, and the men with their unkempt looks and unshaven faces could fill the coat as Italian bandits. It would be worth the price of admission to see one of these fierce and unshaven fellows—say the silent hunter, Wm. West—march across the theatre stage, assume a high tragic pose and shout: "Ha! I will marry the duke's daughter, or I'll have blood, blood!"

Monday, Nov. 21.—It is pouring rain this morning, but about 10 o'clock, in spite of the rain, Capt. White and some of the men go to the woods. Start several deer, and had some fine chances, but no one had a shot except Varner, who shot twice at a fawn, but his horse was unruly, which caused him to miss, for he is a deadly shot. The boys who remained in the camp killed some squirrels and ducks, and Pendleton killed a large crane, four hundred yards with his Winchester.

The wagon from Watson is here and we are going to start for home in the morning. Hart has a live young fawn to carry to his Kentucky home.

Tuesday morning we are up soon, for visions of home gladden our eyes. The tents are down, wagon loaded and 12 m. finds us on the banks of the great river anxiously awaiting the Kate's coming. The Kate does not come until nearly six o'clock, and the boys pass the time in consuming the remains of our Tennessee corn juice, and shooting at passing geese. They made better progress in getting away with the Tennessee than they did with the geese, although Pendleton killed an eagle and a goose flying with his Winchester. At dark the Kate came, but could not take our wagons and horses until she returned from Arkansas City, and then the boys ingloriously fled with the exception of Capt. White, West and Hart, who remained on the river bank all night. The temptations of the Kate's good feeding, warm berths, bright saloon and never failing bar, broke us all up, and we lost our discipline for once.

In the morning at 7 o'clock our camp was passed and all aboard for Memphis under bright skies. A pleasant trip of two days and nights on the great river and then Memphis and home.

For more than twenty years I have been writing these minutes, without hope of fame or lure thereby, but because the "boys" have wished me to do so. Twenty years traversing the same paths and writing of like incidents, and if they are not thrillingly interesting there is some excuse. It has been no trouble whatever, but a pleasure. They are not ornate productions, but "chronicles," like those of Sir John Falstaff. They are entitled to credence for they are very true in all essential particulars. If I have ever deviated from the path of truth, the reason why has been plainly apparent and no man need fail to see it. This annual hunt is the recreation of the year for men who have business all the other days of that year, and are faithful to it, and who believe that all work and no play makes of John a dull boy.

To-day is Thanksgiving day, and our hearts go out in praise to the kind Father, who has kept us in this, as in all other things, and brought us in safety and peace to our old Kentucky homes. P.

Hot Springs.

Have you ever visited Hot Springs? Alas! You meet while there so many instances of terrible blood poisoning, evidenced by disfigurement of face and form. Hither rush sufferers from scrofula, syphilis, eczema, salt rheum, ulcers, blebbed skin, twisted and aching joints, limbs made crooked by rheumatism, etc., etc. Some find relief, some do not and some come away poor in purse and grievously disappointed. It costs money to visit and sojourn at Hot Springs. The experiment of going there cannot be indulged in without considerable expense. How thankful then should everyone be to know there is a remedy more beneficial in cases of blood poisoning than Hot Springs. We refer to Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) As to its merits thousands will testify.

Z. T. Haller, of Macon, Ga., writes: "I contracted blood poison. I first tried physicians, and then went to Hot Springs. I returned home a ruined man physically. Nothing seemed to do me any good. My mother persuaded me to try B. B. B. To my utter astonishment every ulcer quickly healed."

Jas. L. Bosworth, Atlanta, Ga., says: "Some years ago I contracted blood poison. I had no appetite, my digestion was ruined, rheumatism drew up my limbs, so I could hardly walk, my throat was cuterized five times. Hot Springs gave me no benefit and my life was one of torture until I gave B. B. B. a trial, and surprising as it may seem, the use of five bottles cured me." Sold by Owen & Moore's Druggists.

A New Stemmery.

Messrs. J. D. Ware and M. H. Nelson have contracted for the erection of a large tobacco stemmery on Campbell street in the rear of Nelson & Dabney's warehouse. Work began this week. The building will be brick 52x165 feet and will be provided with every convenience and improvement for facilitating the work. It will be completed in January.—New Era.

A WAR OF WORDS.

A Spirited Discussion Over Expert Witnesses.

The Prosecution Gains a Point In the Avant Trial—Dr. Rollow An Expert.

There was a strong effort made yesterday evening by Geo. Avant's counsel to "knock out expert testimony, so-called. It came about when the prosecution began questioning Dr. Rollow on the effects of strychnine poison on the human system. Dr. Rollow was well acquainted with Mrs. Avant and was present at the time the body was disinterred. No objection, of course, was made to his testimony until he was questioned as above stated. Here, however, the fight came.

The defense held that this expert business had been carried to a greater extreme in Montgomery county than in any other county in the State. Every case that comes up, they claimed, some little doctor is put on the witness stand as an expert. Narrowing it down to a point, the defense held that a man must be experienced to a certain degree before he would be considered, properly, an expert. The mere knowledge he could get from books on strychnine poisoning would not make him an expert. He must obtain experience in this particular line, by coming in contact with cases of strychnine poisoning, before he could be put on the witness stand as an expert. They also claimed that the prosecution had no right to make up its case and then put a doctor on the stand to say whether they had convicted their man. They thought this was taking the case out of the hands of the jury. Speeches were made along this line by Col. House, Judge Quarles, Mr. Daniel and Gen. Quarles, attorneys for the defense.

They were met, however, by the prosecution in an able manner. Mr. Burney and Mr. Savage argued the case at some length, holding that a doctor did not have to handle persons who have been poisoned by the use of strychnine to tell what effect the drug would have on the system. They could learn its effects by reading books, and that when a man was well acquainted with any subject he was what the law designated an expert.

This argument occupied nearly an hour, and at times it became very interesting and heated. Judge Tyler ruled in favor of the prosecution, admitting Dr. Rollow as an expert witness. The remainder of the afternoon was then taken up in examining Dr. Rollow.

When court assembled this morning Joseph Batts, of Lafayette, Ky., was put on the stand. He testified to meeting the prisoner in the road the day before the death of Mrs. Avant. He had quite an extended conversation with him, and in the course of the same Avant said he had been to a neighbor's house to give away his (Avant's) dogs. The defendant then said to him that he was a very miserable man and did not care much to live. The fact of the business was, he rather wanted to die. He also said that his wife was in very wretched health and that he expected her to die that night. He said something further about her property, and that he wanted her to make a will, or he had been trying to get her to do so. The impression made on the witness' mind when he heard next day that Mrs. Avant was dead, was that Avant talked too much about dying.

The next witness Dr. Wickham, of Palmyra, was the expert witness in the other trial. The drift of his testimony went to show to the jury the effects of strychnine, when taken in large doses, on the human system, in producing death. It will be remembered that Dr. Wickham came into prominence, as an expert witness here in the Finney Saunders trial, a case somewhat similar to the one now going on in the Criminal court. Dr. Wickham's familiarity with this particular line of medicine has been the subject of much comment, and all hands agree that he has a wonderful knowledge of the same.

The prosecution will probably rest its case this evening, and to-morrow witnesses for the defense will be introduced.

DENOUNCED AS VILLAINOUS.

The Scheme of Alfred Rothschild to Demoralize Silver.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A special to The Sun from Washington says:

Representative Bland denounces the Rothschild proposition as a villainous scheme to demoralize silver. Mr. Bland is the chairman of the house committee on coinage, weights and measures. He characterizes Rothschild's plan as an insult to the friends of silver all over the world. He contends that silver is now worth sixty pence, and to reduce its price to forty-three pence simply means the demoralization of all the silver money in the world. The entire silver currency now amounts to $100,000,000 and Rothschild's scheme would demoralize $100,000,000.

Mr. Bland says the adoption of his plan would mean the loss of $100,000,000 of United States currency and Mr. Bland cannot believe that the United States commissioner will ever do it. It is the boldest scheme for the contraction and demoralization of silver ever proposed, he says, and is nothing less than the first step toward an endeavor on the part of the gold barons to stop all use of silver as currency. He does not believe the Rothschild plan will be adopted by the conference, but if it should he feels confident that the decision would never be ratified by the congress of the United States.

Rothschild's Scheme.

The scheme was sprung Monday by Alfred Rothschild, of the English delegation, who proposed that the government should form an association having for its object the collective purchase, annually of $5,000,000, equal to 125,000,000 francs of silver for $25,000,000 this to continue for a maximum period of five years, under the express condition that the government of the United States continue its monthly purchase of silver similarly to the purchases heretofore made by said government, equal to about 50,000,000 ounces of silver.

Also that the collective purchases of the powers should be suspended if, in the course of the said five years, silver should reach the price of forty-three pence an ounce (about eighty-six cents), the result desired being to consider how to obtain that rate.

At Attorney's Great Hall.

DENVER, Dec. 1.—Attorney George S. Kohn has disappeared and with him about $100,000. The worst sufferers are the three daughters of the late Mr. Gillman. Mr. Kohn managed the estate left them, which was valued at between $50,000 and $70,000, and not a trace of it can now be found.

A SHORT SESSION.

At Least That is the Evidence at the Present.

Washington Hotels Filling Up With Politicians and the City Taking on the Aspect of a Metropolis.

Special to the Leaf-Chronicle.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—As the date for the convening of Congress approaches, Washington puts off its provincial garb and takes on the aspect of a metropolis. The hotels are filling up rapidly, and in the corridors of the Elbitt, the Shorham, Willards and the Johnston politicians are gathering and conferring or congratulating with each other as they happen to be of the losing or victorious party in the last campaign.

The appropriation committee is the only one in session now, but conferences in the committee rooms are of frequent occurrence.

Speaker Crisp, who is already on the ground, has a constant stream of callers, most of whom give him assurance of reelection in Congress, which meets next March. The evidences now are that this will be a short session.

Better Than a Fortune.

Hundreds of doctors prescribe Lemon Chill Tonic in their practice knowing it to be a more pleasant combination than they can compound, while the results are certain. ## WHAT WILL YOU DO?

Shall No Effort Be Made in the Interest of Public Enterprise?

An Earnest Appeal to Public Spirited Citizens to Attend the Board of Trade Meeting To-morrow.

Much good has resulted to Clarksville from the Board of Trade meetings. In fact this organization has been the incubator of almost every public enterprise, and the city has scarcely advanced one step without such aid. Away back in 1869 this organization was gotten up to fight for the tobacco trade and transportation facilities. It was a great fight and cost our people lots of money, but it was a success and led on to many other things, all of which have brought blessings and prosperity.

It does seem now, since politics has settled and the whole country is expecting a new era of prosperity, in which the South is to be greatly blessed, that it is time for Clarksville to wake up and lead off, catching at its full tide that will surely soon set in. Certainly every man in the city who feels happy over the change ought to feel like meeting with the Board at the Exchange Friday night and discussing the situation generally, putting their heads together for a general forward movement.

There is now a gentleman here proposing to establish a canning factory. It may be the best thing that could possibly come to Clarksville, or it may not. But how are our people to know this unless the matter is given a fair investigation? The canning business is new here, our people don't understand it, but it may be the very thing that is best adapted to our wants and the general prosperity of the community, as we believe it is, but how are people to know this who refuse to inquire into the question? It has proven a great blessing to other communities, and why not this if rightly taken hold of? Surely Clarksville people have decided that they don't want any more factories or enterprises, or they would spare an evening for discussing matters of interest to the city which would be beneficial in other ways, whether they conclude to have a canning factory or not.

If the canning business will barely clear ten per cent. for the company and confer half the blessings on the community it promises, then a factory of 1,600 cans capacity, distributing $1,000 every day it runs, at a cost of $5,000 already set up and guaranteed, it will certainly be the best and cheapest investment the city ever made for that amount of money.

We would urge all members of the Board of Trade, and all citizens interested, to attend the meeting Friday night and look into this matter and others likely to come up. Then if the canning factory is thought to be a good thing let all take some stock and start it. Then no one can suffer much by a failure, while all may profit greatly by its success. If other places have made successes, why not Clarksville, with her brain, muscle and capital, and a country adapted to the business? Turn out Friday night and talk about it.

Worth Knowing.

City Council Meeting.

The City Council will meet in regular monthly session to-night at the city hall. For one time in its history the meeting will be held on the first night of the month, a fact which people having bills against the city should bear in mind. If they are not in to-night they will run over to the next monthly meeting. So far as the LEAF-CHRONICLE can learn, there will be nothing out of the regular line up for discussion to-night.

Farmers come fifteen miles to my store to get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many of them, like myself, are never without it in their homes.
